Father Stephen's Message to the Faithful

Two young monks went down to the city to sell their baskets. They separated for a while and during this period one of them fell to a serious sin of the flesh. Afterwards, darkened by despair, he wished under no circumstances to return to the desert.

"Go back alone. I will remain here," he told the other monk as soon as they met again.

"Why, my brother? What happened to you?" the other monk asked him kindly, without having an inkling as to the reason for his fellow monk's decision not to return to the desert.

"Ah, since you insist on knowing, when we separated I went to a woman. Now I have just lost my soul. What is there for me in the desert?"

The pure monk was shaken on hearing of the sin to which his friend had fallen. However, he did not show this. Indeed, to save his friend from the rapacious clutches of despair, he pretended that the same thing had also happened to him.

"Let us return to the desert, brother," he said with tears in his eyes, "and let us both struggle together. God, a Father who loves people, will see our repentance and will forgive us."

With these and other words of comfort, he convinced the truly guilty monk to follow him to the desert. When they reached the skete, they both confessed and were put under severe penance by the Fathers.

For an entire year the innocent monk repented and struggled for the sake of his guilty brother, taking upon himself all of the shame for a sin that he had not even contemplated. God accepted his offering and rewarded the monk in the following way:

One night, as one of the great Fathers of the skete there prayed, he heard a voice tell him,

"Because of the great love of the innocent monk, I forgive the guilty one."

After this, the Fathers granted a release from their penance to the guilty monks, never knowing which one was indeed the guilty person.

— From LOVE, by Bishop Chrysostomos

*** Note: This is not a commentary on "woman as temptress or woman as evil." The story could just as easily have begun, "Two young nuns..." It is rather a commentary on God's love and forgiveness when we falter in our particular calling and obedience, and fall into despair. Additionally, it reminds us of Christ's taking on our sins, and our call to do the same for one another, sharing each others burdens in the Lord.

St Tikhon's Monastery 99th Annual Memorial Day Pilgrimage Icon of Tikhvin Mother of God begins journey to Russia at St Tikhon Monastery Pilgrimage

SOUTH CANAAN, PA - As its first stop on what is projected to be a year-long journey to its original home at the Dormition Monastery in Tikhvin, Russia, the wonder-working icon of the Tikhvin Mother of God will be available for veneration during the 99th annual Pilgrimage to Saint Tikhon Monastery here May 23-26, 2003.

His Beatitude, Metropolitan Herman, Primate of the Orthodox Church in America, and members of the Holy Synod of Bishops will welcome the icon at the monastery entrance at 3:00 p.m. on Friday, May 23, marking the pilgrimage's formal opening. Following the celebration of Vespers and Matins, a procession with the icon will make its way around the monastery church and the Akathist Hymn in honor of the icon will be sung.

"Tradition holds that the icon is one of several ascribed to the Evangelist Luke," according to the Very Rev. John Matusiak, OCA Communications Director. "In the fifth century, the icon was transferred from Jerusalem to Constantinople, where it was enshrined in the Blachernae church built in its honor. It miraculously appeared over Lake Ladoga in northern Russia in 1383 and was ultimately enshrined in Tikhvin's Dormition Monastery."

The late Archbishop John [Garklavs] of Chicago became the icon's guardian in 1944, while he was stationed in Riga, Latvia.

"Archbishop John brought the icon to the US in 1949, and it has remained in Chicago ever since," Father Matusiak adds. "After Archbishop John's death in the early 1980s, the Very Rev. Sergei Garklavs, the Archbishop's adopted son, was entrusted with the icon's care, with the provision that it be returned to the monastery in Tikhvin after the demise of the Soviet regime."

According to the Very Rev. Alexander Garklavs, Archbishop John's grandson and rector of Holy Trinity Church, East Meadow, NY, "Archbishop John always believed that the fate of the icon was in God's providence and that the Theotokos herself was responsible for its miraculous journeys. It is our humble sense of that divine providence that we now feel that the time has come for the icon to be returned to the Tikhvin monastery, where it had been for over five centuries."

At the recent Spring Session of the OCA's Holy Synod of Bishops, Father Garklavs briefed the hierarchs on details of the icons return to Tikhvin, which is slated to coincide with the celebration of the icon's feastday on the new calendar, June 26, 2004.

Faithful will have the rare opportunity to venerate the icon throughout the pilgrimage to Saint Tikhon Monastery. In addition, several Services of Thanksgiving will be celebrated before the icon. On Monday, May 26, a Service of Thanksgiving in the icon's honor will be followed by the anointing of the sick, infirm, and all pilgrims.

The complete pilgrimage schedule is posted in .pdf format at St. Tikhon Pilgrimage on the OCA web site and appears in the March-April issue of "The Orthodox Church" newspaper. Historical notes on the icon are also posted on the web site at History of the ICON OF TIKHVIN MOTHER OF GOD and appear in the same issue of TOC.

Holy, Glorious, Great, God-Crowned and Equal to the Apostles, Emperor Constantine and Helen

This great and renowned sovereign of the Christians was the son of Constantius Chlorus (the ruler of the westernmost parts of the Roman empire), and of the blessed Helen. He was born in 272, in (according to some authorities) Naissus of Dardania, a city on the Hellespont. In 306, when his father died, he was proclaimed successor to his throne. In 312, on learning that Maxentius and Maximinus had joined forces against him, he marched into Italy, where, while at the head of his troops, he saw in the sky after midday, beneath the sun, a radiant pillar in the form of a cross with the words: "By this shalt thou conquer." The following night, our Lord Jesus Christ appeared to him in a dream and declared to him the power of the Cross and its significance. When he arose in the morning, he immediately ordered that a labarum (a banner or standard of victory over the enemy) be made in the form of a cross, and he inscribed on it the Name of Jesus Christ. On the 28th Of October, he attacked and mightily conquered Maxentius, who drowned in the Tiber River while fleeing. The following day, Constantine entered Rome in triumph and was proclaimed Emperor of the West by the Senate, while Licinius, his brother-in-law, ruled in the East. But out of malice, Licinius later persecuted the Christians. Constantine fought him once again, and utterly destroyed him in 324, and in this manner he became monarch over the West and the East. Under him and because of him all the persecutions against the Church ceased. Christianity triumphed and idolatry was overthrown. In 325 he gathered the First Ecumenical Council in Nicaea, which he himself personally addressed. In 324, in the ancient city of Byzantium, he laid the foundations of the new capital of his realm, and solemnly inaugurated it on May 11, 330, naming it after himself, Constantinople; since the throne of the imperial rule was transferred thither from Rome, it was named New Rome, the inhabitants of its domain were called Romans, and it was considered the continuation of the Roman Empire. Falling ill near Nicomedia, he requested to receive divine Baptism, according to Eusebius (The Life of Constantine. Book IV, 61-62), and also according to Socrates and Sozomen; and when he had been deemed worthy of the Holy Mysteries, he reposed in 337, on May 21 or 22, the day of Pentecost, having lived sixty-five years, of which he ruled for thirty-one years. His remains were transferred to Constantinople and were deposited in the Church of the Holy Apostles, which had been built by him.

As for his holy mother Helen, after her son had made the Faith of Christ triumphant throughout the Roman Empire, she undertook a journey to Jerusalem and found the Holy Cross on which our Lord was crucified. After this, Saint Helen, in her zeal to glorify Christ, erected churches in Jerusalem at the sites of the Crucifixion and Resurrection, in Bethlehem at the cave where our Saviour was born, another on the Mount of Olives whence He ascended into Heaven, and many others throughout the Holy Land, Cyprus, and elsewhere. She was proclaimed Augusta, her image was stamped upon golden coins, and two cities were named Helenopolis after her in Bithynia and in Palestine. Having been thus glorified for her piety, she departed to the Lord being about eighty years of age, according to some in the year 330, according to others, in 336.
